Forming a body

Claudia de la Torre founded Berlin-based backbonebooks in 2011 to formalize her own practice and publish other artists’ books. Creating objects, fields, spaces in relation to the book as a historical & contemporary medium – backbonebooks performs consistently in a flexible, conceptual and collaborative process, aiming to open a new perspective into what a book can be.

Black snow
Claudia de la Torre

29×21 cm, 100 pages, perfect binding
Black and white printing Edition of 1 copy, numbered and stamped
backbonebooks, 2010

Black snow is a reference to oblivion - a metaphor for memory processes that deal with accumulation and erosion. It follows one rule: The action of photocopying hundred copies every day, starting the with a blank paper sheet, until the ink runs out. The copy of the copy of the copy. Returning this way to the beginning, a white A4 page. Each page is stamped with the date in which the copy was made, and every hundred pages are then bound into a volume. Every copy is then an original.

edition of 100 signed and numbered copies.
backbonebooks 2012

Unlike most other birds, ducks, geese and swans lose all their flight feathers at once, rendering them flightless for a period. Claudia took a ten minutes walk from the gallery to the print shop. On her way back, she collected some objects she found on the road. Riet knows Claudia has a photo collection, so she gave her some prints of shots she had taken around ten years ago. It was the moulting season at that time in Tilburg...

Knaurs Lexikon der Moderner Kunst
Claudia de la Torre

*Hard cover, 885 cut-out pages, vinyl. 14.8×21 cm,
Offset, edition of 5 signed and numbered copies.
Produced on demand
backbonebooks 2012*

Claudia de la Torre's scissored Knaurs textbook renders visible the gaps in the modernist canon, the pictures forgotten or overlooked in the standard history of western art. These pictures speak loudly in their absence. Moreover, the cutouts create a tangible scrim—frames for missing pictures, perhaps, or an alternative history which invites the viewer to create new and compelling narratives. By cutting out the information contained in the original lexicon, an abstract forms, reminding a modernist image is revealed. A book is also a sculpture, an object.

Claudia de la Torre

*Soft cover, 13×21 cm, 64 pages,
edition of 10 signed and numbered copies.
backbonebooks 2013*

On the occasion of an exhibition at the Staatliche Kunsthalle Baden-Baden, Claudia de la Torre initiated her project “The Questions Library” in 2012 as Work in Progress. In the exhibition space she sets up a library with a carpet, a table and chairs, a reading lamp and bookshelves. An open invitation to tender invites visitors to donate books containing a question in the title. The received titles are registered and catalogued by type of questions. Over the duration of the exhibition, the stock of books grows. After the exhibitions, the artist produces a catalogue with all new entries. To date, “The Questions Library” has been shown in three exhibitions and the collection of books has grown to about 500 titles.

The work of Sebastian Maloberti moves between accumulation and withdrawal. The status of the elements are repeated and reconsidered: found wood, photographs, paintings, plaster, those elements are used for their materiality, they can appear and disappear with brutality, but with extreme acuteness. In that way Sebastian has the capacity to convoke the meaning even though his work resists language and any formal frame that it could propose.

Claudia de la Torre's works often start from a book. She examines the structure and relationship between the surfaces and forms – the book covers, titles, the layout of the individual pages. By means of appropriation and dé- tournement, her work often takes the form of an artist book, a library or an archive. How is our knowledge of the world organized, classified and archived? What are the underlying systems of our knowledge? How do we approach what we learn of the world? For her new work 'Cities in Flight or The Satellite Variations', de la Torre takes James Blish's science fiction novel as a starting point to examine the structure of story-telling and to build up a parallel narrative to the one evident in the story.

In the past, I have worked with encyclopaedias, lexicons, and dictionaries - Always with the idea in mind, that this kind of books have to be actualised to actually "work" on a daily basis. The process of accumulation, the (re-) ordering of information as well as the relation between language, word and image appeared to be major subjects since the beginning of my artistic practice. For this series of unique books, I took as a starting point the original French volumes of Encyclopaedia Universalis. Starting with vol. 4 - the one that goes from CAVAFY to CORTÁZAR because of Julio Cortázar's novel Hopscotch - he wrote this book having in mind that one could start reading it at any point, at any page - so that each time, a new reading path could be discovered, giving the chance of getting lost and found in the story - and making evident the potentiality of the book as an object in which to find our own way. Diverse lectures. Endless variations. A second decision came after: How to work with a book that is already existing in terms of what to leave in and out?. I decided I would only leave in, the original pages that by means of folding create a new image - given by the order of the original encyclopaedia, and framed by the white of the page.

Buchhandling is a site-specific installation that interferes with the structure of Josua Strass bookshop in Baden-Baden. Claudia de la Torre takes the position of the titles on the shelf as a starting point: all titles which usually show their spine to the public, are turned inwards so that the edge of the book is visible and the title therefore hidden. This gesture shifts the relation the visitors and booksellers have towards books as objects and allows a new perspective of the space, transforming the bookshop into a sculpture. This edition contains a list of all books in chronological order which were turned around to its original position. A bookshop is the distribution end of the publishing process, and this time also the beginning of it.

Unfortunately is a collection of 45 rejection letters sent between 2008 - 2018 to the artist Omri Livne. Exposing himself to the never ending struggle of finding a balance between art making and having a pay job. By editing the structure of the sentences, but not the content - he makes evident the use of language and words rejection letters make use of. Ordered in three categories: art, employment, and studies, plus one acceptance letter- signed and officially stamped sent by backbonebooks accepting his manuscript for publication.

Progetti / jekte / jects is a collection - kept in year-volumes - of single type-written papers.
During determined periods of time, Antoanetta Marinov writes daily lines about her current state of being. The tangential, quick thoughts related to her life as a contemporary woman artist are tracked and turned into projects. It is a non standard writing, happening at the moment in which writing is being performed. The single papers of each volume are interchangeable and each concluded in itself.
They have being written in the years 2003-2005 (German) and 2019 (Italian).

edition of 250 copies, with a text by Geraldine Tedder
backbonebooks, 2019

Delphine Chapuis Schmitz sifted Christoph Schifferli's collection on artists' books, selected single words and sentences. Isolated and not longer attached to a context, the words were combined anew to verses, the verses placed on pages (...) The quest is on appropriation in writing, on sources no longer, on content through form. On poetry. Concealing, unveiling: A quest suggests change, is often allegorical, a plot divide to introduce momentum into a narrative. (...) A livre à venir, now become.

SIDE A
Claudia de la Torre

Soft cover, 14,8×21 cm,
600 pages, black and white digital print,
edition of 50,
backbonebooks 2019

SIDE A has been composed from words out of "Cities in Flight" a four volume Sci-Fi novel written by James Blish between 1950 and 1962 and published in 1970. Science Fiction envisions alternative worlds, it opens up new possible realities. This book represents one amongst a potentially unlimited range of possibilities that words and its combinations have to offer. I selected each word, page after page words arrange themselves into new constellations of sentences, creating a coherent narrative. A book is a place. This book is a site-specific work, only possible within this story. This constellations manifest themselves as shapes within the white page, the words floating. While the word choice is intentional, the black shapes appear as a result of my selection, functioning as arrows pointing into a new direction. I often think about how the pages of the book rub each other, overlapping and creating new layers charged with meaning.

Lesness is a short text written by Samuel Beckett in 1970.”Words 770-1,538 of the text turn out to be nothing but words 1-769 in a new order” ...”its orderly disorder calls for a reading process in which the reader works to untangle the threads of sameness and difference to discern the underlying structure, becoming aware of the usually unconscious processes of interpretation” - Every book shows four unique word arrangements, therefore constructing a new text every time.
